HERE'S ANOTHER ONE

Canterbury seems to be a hotspot for rare albino squirrels.

This one was spotted at Iffin Farmhouse south of the city, gathering nuts for the winter. Statistics say this squirrel is one of only 25 in the country, but he is the second spotted in Canterbury in recent weeks.

ENGLAND fencing coach Paul Romang, who told teenage girls they could become Olympic stars if they gave him sexual favours, has been given a two-year suspended jail sentence.

The 59-year-old promised the youngsters stardom if they submitted to his training regime, which included special massages.

But things went too far when Romang massaged a 16-year-old protege's breasts and buttocks, and now he will never coach teenage girls again.

The coach, who taught fencing at three Kent clubs and at posh King's School, Canterbury, has been banned from working with anyone under the age of 18 after a jury found him guilty at Canterbury Crown Court.

He is now on the sex offender's register and cannot get work. He also has a six month suspended prison sentence hanging over him.

The court heard how Romang stole into the girl's bedroom when she was staying with him at his home in Ramsgate, Kent.

He told her to lie on her bed while he massaged her back, but the massaging got out of hand and the girl told her mother, who contacted police.

Two other girls testified that Romang had tried to massage them on trips to Hungary for special coaching. All three girls were showered with gifts and favours.

Danny Moore, defending, said: "Mr Romang's working life is essentially over; he earned a

PRIMARY CONCERN: Kingsmead (left) and Payne Smith primary schools could be amalgamated after plans for a new school were axed

School merger back on table as new primary plans are scrapped

■ BY JENNY ARMSTRONG

PLANS to amalgamate the Kingsmead and Payne Smith primary schools are once again going ahead despite scrapped plans for a purpose-built school.

Originally the primaries were to have an entirely new set of buildings on Canterbury's Kingsmead development site. But due to Kent County Council (KCC) budget cuts the long-awaited new school was axed.

Instead the Kingsmead and Payne Smith primaries will benefit from

£2 million of KCC money, as well as cash from selling off older school buildings, in order to renovate existing Kingsmead buildings and add some new ones.

Nigel Genders, education director for the Canterbury diocese, said: "We have spent many years of trying to find a suitable solution to enable the children of Kingsmead and Diocesan Payne Smith Church of England Primary schools to receive and excellent education in buildings that are fit for purpose."

"The proposed amalgamation presents a wonderful opportunity, which will be of great benefit to the whole community."

The new idea is now out for consultation with pupils, staff, and families as well as those who live near where the amalgamated school will be.

Currently the Kingsmead School has only 100 pupils and the Payne Smith school has 150 to 200 children. Kingsmead's crumbling buildings are badly in need of repair.

And the current Payne Smith school is currently in a high pollution inner-city area with no green space. If plans go ahead the new school will open in September 2012.

If the plans are agreed to all children from the Diocesan and Payne Smith Primary School will move over to the Kingsmead Primary School, and the Payne Smith school's Broad Street site with historic buildings would be sold.

This would mean both primaries would become a Church of England voluntary controlled school, meaning the church would have some say over who some of the new school's governors would be.

Sarah Hohler, KCC cabinet member for education, said: "A lot of work has been going on to find a way forward that will benefit the children of both schools."

"The proposed amalgamation will give us the chance to bring together the best from each existing school and create a new school the community can be proud of. This will help all the pupils from this area to realise their full potential."

Consultation on the new plans ends on Friday, January 14.

Teacher abused position of trust to get sexual favours good living as a coach, but that has all gone.

"He has lost a great deal and the loss of his reputation has affected him deeply."

Sentencing him Judge Adele Williams said there was "clear and compelling" evidence he used his position of trust to get sexual favours from his pupils. She said Romang was obsessed with the 16-year-old.

Judge Williams said: "I have no doubt she found the whole episode frightening and distressing. You abused your position of trust."

"You were forceful and I expect she didn't know how to deal with your advances."

"The only person you deluded was yourself"

Romang was also given a two-year supervision order and put under curfew for three months.

County hall funding to tackle social problems

KENT has been selected as one of 16 areas nationwide to be given direct control over spending for social problems.

The move will allow County Hall chiefs to run the recently launched new local budgets, free of centrally imposed conditions, so they can decide how to use money to help families with complex needs.

The budget will bring together various central funding streams into one pot and the council will then be able to choose how it uses the money.

Kent County Council leader Paul Carter has welcomed the move, stating it could make a real, long-term difference to people's lives.

"We have long been calling for a move to area-based budgets and the freedom at a local level to use funding and resources to best support our communities," he said.

"We are best placed to know what our residents in our county need and this new opportunity means that we can make every penny count."

Eric Pickles, Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, said up until now councils had no freedom in this kind of spending.

"Whitehall funding had been funnelled through hundreds of disparate programmes wrapped up in tight financial conditions that effectively strangled local choice," he added.

KCC said community budgets will join up services for an integrated approach, so a family with multiple problems will not have to deal with a number of different schemes and agencies to get help.

The council said it will also reduce costs by removing barriers, duplication and waste.

Squatters stack up to a big problem as fire breaks out

A SQUAT in Whitstable Road caught alight on Saturday after residents tried to use fireplaces with partially blocked chimneys.

The Victorian three-storey brick building was recently cleared of its illegal occupants after a court warrant allowed council and police officers to force entry to the building.

The house was then boarded up. Neighbours had been complaining of smoke drifting into their houses because squatters had been lighting fires in fireplaces which had blocked chimneys. There were also health issues because of faeces and urine in the building.

Three fire engines were sent to the building at 9.20pm because of a fire in a ground-floor fireplace. The fire was put out within 20 minutes.

Thugs escape jail over Whitefriars punch-up

■ BY IAN READ

FOUR jobs who rampaged through Canterbury's Whitefriars shopping centre have been given suspended prison sentences.

Squaddie David Watson, 20, of Howe Barracks, Karl Lashley, 20, of Dan Drive, Faversham, Dale Cooper, 19, of Chineham Way, Canterbury, and Ben Hutson, 20, of Oxford Road, Canterbury, all admitted their part in a brawl in which a man's arm was broken.

Watson also admitted punching his girlfriend in the face in a separate incident, while Lashley was in breach of a community order imposed two years ago.

Neil Sweeney, prosecuting, showed Canterbury Magistrates CCTV footage showing the youths confronting four other men in the shopping centre.

Kicked

They saw Hutson and Cooper punch two men, while both Watson and Lashley kicked a man lying on the floor, breaking his arm.

Mr Sweeney said: "Their actions were fuelled by drink. They had been drinking to celebrate Lashley getting a job."

One of the victims is seen indicating he does not want any trouble before Watson punches him in the stomach.

The court was told Watson was asleep at former girlfriend Rose Platern's home in Tudor Road, Canterbury, when she heard he had been kissing another girl.

As she screamed abuse at him, Watson tried to strangle her, he then punched her in the face, giving her a nose bleed. She also ended up with a black eye and a fat lip.

CAUGHT ON CCTV: Canterbury Magistrates were shown CCTV footage of the brawl in Whitefriars shopping centre

Watson is already in military custody for desertion and is likely to be thrown out of the Army.

He was given 70 days imprisonment suspended for two years and ordered to do a total of 200 hours community work. He was given a two-year supervision order and three months curfew and ordered to pay £50 compensation and £170 costs. He was ordered to stay away from Tudor Road.

Lashley also got 70 days suspended, 150 hours community work, a three-month curfew and was ordered to pay £250 compensation plus £135 costs.

Cooper received 50 days suspended, a two-year supervision order to include 100 hours work, a three month curfew, told to pay £85 costs and ordered to pay £250 compensation.

Hutson received the same sentence as Cooper.

Boarding pupils taught lesson in fire simulation

KING'S School students got a rude awakening last week when 60 firemen took part in a realistic training exercise to test emergency procedures.

The historic boarding school, which is made up of many ancient, listed buildings in difficult to access parts of the cathedral precincts, hosted the training exercise which simulated a major blaze.

One of the school's vacant dormitories was filled with smoke and a simulated fire on Wednesday, November 17, and many of the institution's dormitories were evacuated.

Firemen then had to search each room in the 'blazing' boarding house and find a trapped casualty.

The firefighters to deal with the awkward layout of the school, most parts of which a fire engine cannot reach.

Response

Fire group manager Russ Jordan, who directed the exercise, said: "This type of training exercise is invaluable for Kent Fire and Rescue Service.

"We wanted to examine our response to an incident at the site and how our plans would work with the school's own emergency procedures.

"The exercise also provided our crews with an excellent opportunity to practise their response within the Cathedral precincts under realistic conditions."

The school also got to test its fire evacuation procedures. Mark Taylor, the school's bursar, said: "We are extremely grateful to be able to test our procedures in such a robust and realistic manner.

"Much has been learnt from the exercise and it has been a great opportunity for us to review our own critical incident response plan under pressure."

Lifeboat races to stranded vessel

ANGLERS had to be rescued when their boat broke down near Herne Bay on Sunday afternoon.

The Whitstable lifeboat was scrambled to rescue the vessel's four passengers.

Helmsman Craig Sidders said: "We launched at 2.35pm and located the craft about 20 minutes later, one mile off Bishopstone between Herne Bay and Reculver.

"All those onboard were fine and were wearing lifejackets. They and their craft were taken in tow for Neptune Jetty, Herne Bay where they were happy to be landed safely ashore."

This callout was the 63rd for the volunteer lifeboat crew this year.

Firecrew cut two out of car

FIREMEN had to rescue two people from a car on Friday after a crash on Rough Common Road.

The road next to Blean Woods, which at one point is steep and treacherous, was closed in both directions while firefighters cut the smash victims out of their car.

One woman was injured in the crash, which happened just after 7pm. She had cuts and bruises and the fire brigade called an ambulance to check her health.

Pals borrowed parents' car then crashed it on late-night hunt for booze

TWO friends were banned from driving after drunkenly smashing a parent's car into a wall following a night time search for booze, a court was told.

Alex Lucas, 19, and his friend Marc Rand, 21, both of Tankerton Road, Whitstable, 'borrowed' Rand's parents' car to drive to Tesco, Chestfield.

On the way back Lucas, who held a provisional licence, was driving when it crashed into a wall and a lamppost, covering a parked car with debris.

Rand drove the Suzuki home from Fitzroy road and then called police.

Lucas pleaded guilty to aggravated vehicle taking, drink driving, driving without L-plates and having no insurance, while Rand admitted stealing the Suzuki, drink driving and having no insurance at Canterbury Magistrates Court.

Neil Sweeney, prosecuting, said homeowner John Goodwin heard engine noise and a bang and reported it to the police.

Minutes later Rand rang them himself to confirm he had crashed his mum's car. Rand was just over the legal limit while Lucas had drunk twice the amount. Will Nelson, defending Lucas, said the pair had been celebrating Nelson's 19th birthday when they ran out of drink and decided to go to the 24-hour store to get more.

He said: "Stupidly he drove on the way back and lost control on a corner crashing into the wall. He is incredibly embarrassed and ashamed. He has never been in court before. His act of stupidity could have resulted in something much worse."

Roger Davies, defending Rand, said: "alcohol warped his mind, and he did something he wouldn't contemplate sober. He had the common sense to call the police and realises he was acting in a ridiculous manner."

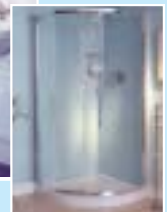

Lucas was disqualified from driving for 18 months, and given a 12-month community order to include 200 hours unpaid work.

He was fined £100 and ordered to pay £100 compensation for the wall, £85 costs and a £15 victim surcharge.

Rand was banned for a year, given a 12-month community order to include 100 hours work, fined £140, and told to pay £85 costs and a £15 victim surcharge.

ALL WHITE: 'Albert', who has made his home at the Iffin Farmhouse, is the second albino squirrel to be seen in Canterbury; the first one (pictured inset) was spotted at St Lawrence cricket ground.

A second rare albino squirrel spotted in city

ANOTHER rare albino squirrel has been sighted in Canterbury.

Wildlife experts say the odds of a true albino squirrel being born are one in 100,000. The UK has a squirrel population of 2.5 million, which means in theory there are only 25 white ones in the British Isles at any one time.

And Canterbury now has two of them – one spotted in St Lawrence Cricket Ground earlier this month and now 'Albert' from Iffin.

Sarah Harman, the owner of the Iffin Farmhouse guesthouse, has had albino Albert living in her garden for more than a year.

She said: "Albert has been picking up nuts for the winter and all sorts. We first saw him around about this time last year. He runs along the wall and over the fence.

"I am absolutely astonished to see there was also one down at the cricket ground, which is a good two or three miles away.

"My guests have seen him, because where the dining room is situated he bounces along the wall. When I have small conferences here people looking out of the window see him too. "It is a privilege to have him here. We get a lot of animals you don't get in the city centre here, although we are very close to Canterbury. It is lovely to have him and we feel very protective towards him.

"Iffin Farmhouse has always been keen to push for things to be sustainable, so we have got quite a few green accolades, but he is one of our white accolades!"

True albino squirrels have blue or pink eyes, as do Albert and the squirrel from the cricket ground. Some grey squirrels are born white because of a recessive gene but are not true albinos and have normal, brown eyes.

And according to the bed and breakfast owner the squirrel may have a natural advantage on his home patch because of seasonal camouflage provided by the garden's white bluebells.

Mrs Harman said: "He stands up for himself. I have seen him squabbling with one of the grey squirrels out here and he fights his own corner."

Did I tell you, you can help charity by reading?

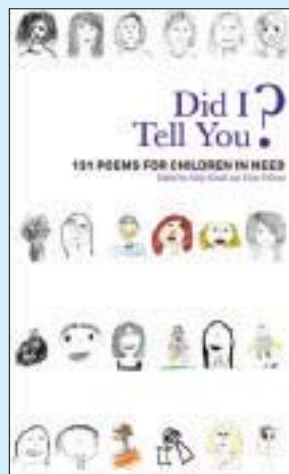

FORMER poet laureate Sir Andrew Motion has thrown his weight behind a charity book created by Kent academics.

The writer, who was knighted for his services to literature in 2009, contributed one of his own works to the collection, which was compiled by University of Kent student Nicky Gould and graduate Vicky Wilson.

The book, Did I Tell You? 131 Poems for Children in Need, also features poems by local school children and other celebrated poets including Patience Agbabi, Abigail Morley and George Szirtes.

Sir Andrew urged people to read the collection. Money raised will go to Children in Need.

Copies of Did I Tell You? 131 Poems for Children in Need is available at www.wordaid-blogs.com/p/publications for £12 (includes £2 postage and packaging).

Lost Herne Bay village is to be resurrected in new atlas of Britain

DETAILS of a lost village are set to be published in a new atlas of Britain – the first comprehensive volume of its type to be published in 40 years.

The Times Atlas of Britain will show how the country has changed over the years so forgotten settlements will be included in its pages.

Among these are Hampton-on-Sea, lost to coastal erosion in 1916 and sited close to Herne Bay.

All that now remains is a part of the original pier, the Hampton Inn, and part of the coastal defences which are visible at low tide.

Jethro Lennox, editor of the book, said: "While compiling the first comprehensive atlas of its type to be published in the UK in over 40 years, we were not only interested in how the United Kingdom has changed geographically over time but the implications for the residents of our islands."

Some of the cottages in the lost settlement were built from the timbers of boats and fishing was its main industry.

Always threatened by the erosion of the coast and the encroachment of the sea the plight of the area was championed in the late 19th century by former Metropolitan Police officer Edmund Reid, one of the detectives attached to the Jack the Ripper enquiry.

MP Gale fears loss of political talent

YOUNG politicians will be put off standing for Parliament unless they are given more time to spend with their families, a long-serving MP has warned.

North Thanet MP Roger Gale says the Commons timetable means most members leave for London before their children wake up and return long after they have gone to bed. The 67-year-old has now helped launch a review of the parliamentary calendar to make it as family-friendly as possible.

"A lot of members are quite young and have only ever known politics," said Mr Gale. "They have children and want to see them. If we want a modern, efficient Parliament we need to be family-friendly or younger candidates just won't do it."

Change

"I would prefer if we started later and finished later, but some of the people who came up with the hours are still in post and will resist change, because no-one likes admitting they were wrong."

The House sits from 2.30pm on Monday and Tuesday; 11.30am on Wednesday; and 10.30am on Thursday.

But many MPs need to arrive far earlier to prepare for meetings, debates and select committee hearings.

Mr Gale is one of the longest-serving members of the procedure committee, which has agreed to conduct an inquiry into whether changes should be made.

The committee will be writing to all MP for their views and encouraging others outside Parliament to have their say.

"This is about how we sit, when we sit and what we do when we sit," said Mr Gale. "It's about what we think the role of an MP in the 21st century really is."

UK needs to be bold on drugs policy, argues campus author

■ BY MARIJKE COX

THE author of a new book on drugs has backed a controversial study led by sacked Government adviser David Nutt which claimed alcohol is more harmful than heroin.

Alex Stevens, professor in criminal justice at the University of Kent, said people needed to be told the truth about the dangers of alcohol and praised Prof Nutt for addressing the issue.

He also said evidence suggested little harm would come from decriminalising personal possession of drugs.

Exposed

The criminologist attended the Independent Scientific Committee summit on Monday, last week, with Prof Nutt – who was sacked last year for saying ecstasy was less harmful than other drugs – and other academics to discuss new findings that exposed alcohol as the most harmful drug overall in relation to damage to users and the wider society.

Prof Stevens said: "While we are not condoning drug use, the implications of alcohol need to be addressed. More people die from alcohol than heroin. Liver disease will be the leading cause of death in ten years' time. Then there is the violence caused by alcohol and the money spent on clearing that up."

The findings of Prof Nutt's study are expected to revive debates over classification of drugs, a

would take money out of the hands of crooks.

"If it was available through licensed, regulated premises, like in the Netherlands and Portugal, weaker and less dangerous cannabis would be sold and gangsters would not make as much money," he said.

Asked whether hard drugs such as crack cocaine and heroin could be decriminalised, Prof Stevens said there needed to be evaluated steps taken to see how it would work, including the possibility of prescription control for addicts.

"The evidence suggests little harm would come from decriminalising personal possession," he said. "Little is known about the potential of more ambitious steps towards legalisation."

Welfare

His book also focuses on the need for better social and welfare support after findings showed the poor suffered most from drug-related harm, such as arrest, imprisonment, illness and death, despite drugs being more common in richer circles.

"There are more drugs in richer areas, but poor people are most affected," he said. "They are more likely to get arrested. This is because in deprived areas there is more crime and policing."

Prof Stevens added: "Rich people are also less likely to become dependent on drugs. They don't do it for a long time. They have other things to do in their lives and have more support."

His book also reveals that increased criminalisation does not reduce drug use, where Portugal and Holland, two countries with liberal drug policies, have lower rates than the UK.

QUESTION & ANSWER

MITCH BENN

Q What do you do for a living?

A It is a ridiculous way to run a career quite frankly, but I seem to be getting on all right with it. It is a difficult thing to define because it is difficult to compare with anything else. It is a comedy gig and it is a rock concert. It is neither one nor the other – it is a third genre really. The gig we had last year at the Gulbenkian in Canterbury was probably one of the best shows of the tours so I am looking forward to it. There are going to be a few differences. It needed a bit more going on visually and physically, so there is more of that going on this year.

Q How did you get into comedy and music?

A That is a long story! I had music lessons when I was a kid and was in a band when I was a teenager. I was in theatre at school and university and did improvised comedy and got sidetracked into doing stand-up. From the get-go with the comedy I always incorporated the music into it because it never really occurred to me not to. I think you can add another dimension if you can use it, so I did and it has become a bit of a unique selling point. I concentrated on the music and that's where the band came from.

Q What do you and the band play?

A We just did something at the Roundhouse for Frank Zappa's 70th birthday. Zappa is somebody who is in the back of my mind when I write sometimes because he used to do things which were insanely complicated and actually quite funny just because of how insanely complicated they were. There are times when the band does things like that. We play every conceivable kind of genre from finger-picking folk, to Broadway musical, to smash your head on the floor heavy metal, sometimes all in the same song. I do a thing where at half time I get ideas from the audience and, during the interval I quickly write something based on those ideas and perform it at the beginning of part two.

Q Where do you get inspiration for your songs?

A Money and deadlines. I have to write to order a lot of the time because of the BBC Radio 4 programme I am in called The Now Show, which is back this week. I am writing for that all the time so that produces quite a lot of material. Interestingly the thing that I am doing at the moment, a song called 'I'm Proud of the BBC', has had a bigger impact than anything else I have ever done. That came entirely from something that was on my mind. That wasn't to anybody's commission or anything. But it seems to have had a really big impact.

Q Why did you write it?

A I wrote it apropos of nothing over the summer. I get very nervous and a bit angry when the knives come out for the BBC. Most of the criticism levelled at the BBC by the rest of the media is not only unfair, but it is calculatedly and deliberately unfair. It is just the BBC's immediate business rivals trash-talking it. I think people would quite like to see someone going in to bat for the BBC once in a while. People moan that we have to pay for it, but why is that a bad thing? You pay for the Fire Brigade whether or not your house burns down. How about we celebrate it? I have been all over the planet and everybody else is in awe of the BBC. I took the song on the tour and everybody went berserk. I released it as a single, which has been out just over a week and has got to number 11 in the indie charts.

Q How do you write songs so quickly?

A It is a pretty stupid skill, but one I have developed. I respond to pressure. That is what really gets me going. The more pressure I am under the more quickly I can work. This half-time song thing I do during the show, I have never actually failed at it. I haven't always come up with something that is particularly brilliant, but I have never not come up with anything at all. But just occasionally I come up with something which is actually pretty worthwhile doing. There are two songs in the set which were written in pretty much those exact circumstances.

Homes cash bonus lifeline for councils

EMPTY properties could become a lifeline for cash-strapped councils after Whitehall announced plans to include them in the money-for-new-houses scheme.

Under proposals published for consultation, town halls could see a massive cash bonus where Government would match the additional council tax raised by every new property for the next six years.

It would also top up council funding with £350 per home during that time.

If the plans go ahead, the New Homes Bonus, originally intended for new houses, would include refurbished older properties made available for accommodation.

On the five-year anniversary of Kent's No Use Empty project, David Ireland, chief executive of the Empty Homes Agency, welcomed the move and said it was illogical not to include long-term empty properties in the bonus scheme.

Aspiration

"It makes sense. There are aspirations for thousands more houses and it should be that empty properties count," he said.

The No Use Empty project, set up in 2005 by Kent County Council and now run by Kent's 12 district and borough authorities, smashed its targets with one in six properties being salvaged. Since it was launched 1,266 empty buildings have been turned into homes.

Across Kent there are 9,000 empty properties. No Use Empty invites owners to get help and advice as well as providing a loan to help finance refurbishments and make properties habitable again.

To be eligible, properties must be either sold or rented after completion and the loans repaid in full, when the money is then recycled for another project.

Face it, you don't need so many online 'friends'

■ BY STEVE KNIGHT

FACEBOOK fanatics risk being dragged into criminal investigations if they add too many unknown people as friends.

Many users compete to build up as many online acquaintances as they can on the social networking website, even if they have never met the people they are adding.

But this, says 22-year-old University of Kent student Zack Whittaker, increases the chances of them being associated with terrorists or gang members and opens them up to intelligence gathering.

Zack writes for the hugely popular ZDNet technology website but says despite his blogs winning him an army of admirers in the United States, he still only has about 200 Facebook friends.

"The more friends you have on Facebook, the more likely it is that you're adding people you don't really know," he said. "The chances are then higher that some of these people will be involved in activity that's not lawful."

"I'm careful not to expose my personal life too much due to the number of readers I have in the States, but because I know every single one of my Facebook friends I can vouch for every single of them. The same can't be said for people who have 1,500 or more."

Zack – who suffers from Tourette's syndrome and admits to involuntarily shouting "bomb" when travelling by train – is currently studying for a degree in criminology and social policy.

He is one of the supporters of National Unfriend Day, which was launched by American talk show host Jimmy Kimmel and held on Wednesday, last week.

"Government agencies like the FBI are not necessarily interested in the conversations people have on Facebook, but more the contacts people make," said Zack.

"If somebody has 1,500 friends and two of them are very nasty characters, they could find themselves dragged into something sinister which they actually know nothing about."

Academy pupils on course for success

STUDENTS from the Canterbury Academy will be completing their Literacy Leaders accredited course this month.

They have been working on a six week 'Playing for success' programme at the Kent Spitfires study centre at the St Lawrence Ground, Canterbury.

The programme uses sport as a motivating factor and aims to improve attainment in English, mathematics and ICT, as well as developing self-esteem and confidence. Four schools are represented every six weeks.

The students from Canterbury Academy who have been involved in the 'Literacy Leaders' course have learnt a number of key skills from communication and team work to self motivation.

The students have been putting their leadership skills into practice through working with primary aged children.

School hopes to add a world record

PUPILS at a Canterbury Primary School are attempting to set a Guinness world record for the biggest maths lesson in multiple locations.

On Friday, December 3, throughout the day students and teachers from across the school will be partaking in a whole host of number-based activities to raise money for the NSPCC.

The event aims to raise as much money as possible for charity and also teach maths in an exciting, innovative way.

The attempt starts 11am.

Holocaust play is history lesson students will always Remember

■ BY JENNY ARMSTRONG

ST EDMUND'S School is to stage a hard-hitting Holocaust play this week, written by the school's head of drama.

Mark Sell, director of drama, conceived the play while teaching at Finchley Catholic High School in North London.

His aim was to engage pupils with the Holocaust in a new and powerful way, to ensure future generations never forget.

The play, entitled Remember, was a huge success and toured Poland, with more than 30 performances there and in London, including professional theatres, synagogues and two groundbreaking performances at the Limmud in 2007.

Mr Sell now directs a new and dynamic cast at St Edmund's School.

He said: "What was clear to us was that we would benefit from examining the Holocaust from a different perspective by using drama to explore individual accounts of the darkest period in human history.

"What better way, I thought, than to do it through the performing arts and to devise a script that would achieve aims of remembrance and further develop performance skills.

"The idea grew quite quickly and I realised that this was an excellent opportunity to travel and tour the production abroad, a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. Poland, in particular Krakow, seemed a natural choice - we have performed Remember at Auschwitz... it does not get more significant or poignant than that.

"We wanted to embark on this important and exciting venture, not only because of the educational opportunities that it offers but also because of the life-enhancing experience it will afford our young people for years to come.

"Moreover, through the arts, our students will be able to 'educate' others of their generation and ensure that they too remember.

Mr Sell said they were extremely fortunate to have been allowed to get the message across to thousands of people and to have as the show's patron Holocaust survivor, Roman Halter.

Many important figures in Holocaust education, including Lord Greville Janner, have supported the play over the years.

Performances of Remember run on November 25, 26 and 27, and the show is suitable for 12+ with parental guidance. Tickets (£5) are available from the Box Office on 01227 475600.

SUCCESSFUL: The play Remember is being staged at St Edmund's this November

Frustrated to know that your child could succeed but is making slow progress?

Is it because of going unnoticed in a large school or a large class size?

Is your child lacking the confidence to flourish?

At Dover College, we are as keen as any other school to cater for the most able pupils and do it well. However, our recent inspection highlighted our great ability as a school to enable our more average pupils to achieve far better than their potential suggested on entry. By offering boys and girls timely affirmation and appropriate challenges in a caring environment, many of them surprise their parents and, more importantly, themselves with their achievements.

Dover College welcomes pupils at any time of the year if there is a place available.

We shouldn't pay school pensions

It is appalling that private schools charging upwards of £20,000 a year have the nerve to supplement their staff pension plans from the public purse.

These are not poor institutions. Like any private company, they should administer their own pension plans or at least get someone to do it for them.

Someone other than the taxpayer that is. We have plenty of other things to pay for, including the expected rise in VAT this January, which will hit many households hard.

I hope the schools named put a stop to this unfair reliance on the public purse.

Jeremy Matthews, Canterbury

Is recycling scheme working for all?

The complacency in Ashford has been shown by these figures and the man in charge states that it is brilliant in the sense that we can only go up; there doesn't seem much help for us does there? For many years Ashford has been trailing being all the other Kent councils, but the man in charge at ABC says that he didn't realize.

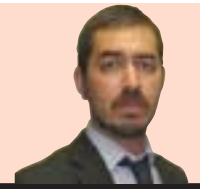

Efficient recycling collections don't have to mean the end of weekly rubbish collections either; Dartford happily do both.

We have three excellent facilities for processing mixed recyclables in Kent, which is why every other Kent council collects ALL paper and cardboard, food and drinks cans and plastic bottles (some collect foil too) in one container.

Why not Ashford? Ashford's blue boxers are very restrictive; they only collect newspaper and magazines, no other paper, no envelopes and cans and glass. There is no provision for mixed paper, cardboard or plastics not to mention foil.

Simon Robinson considers the implications of the recent royal announcement

PRINCE William popped the big question and turned girlfriend Kate Middleton into his bride-to-be.

I was pleased as punch when I heard the news.

After all, who doesn't love a good wedding?

And our future king-to-be seems like a nice chap.

He's a born orator, quite charming, personable and (so far) blunder-free, unlike his error-prone 'better seen not heard' grandfather and Nazi costume-wearing younger brother, Harry.

Which brings me on to his fiancée.

Her credentials certainly stand up on first inspection.

She's well-to-do and from the 'right' sort of family – a winning combination of social circles and silver spoons; we'll have no Disney-esque rags to riches fairly tales in our monarchy, thank you very much.

Kate's navigated her royal courtship with relative ease, and has even managed to keep herself largely out of the public eye for years.

Which makes me wonder if she's made the right choice by saying 'yes' to Bonnie Prince William.

What must it feel like to be catapulted from status of 'Prince's girlfriend' to 'potential future Queen of the Commonwealth'?

The poor girl has gone from the odd tabloid mention to front-page news across the globe.

Thousands of journalists will spend the next few months pouring through her past, dedicating weeks to track down old school friends, teachers, neighbours and colleagues in a bid to turn up anything vaguely resembling an interesting snippet of information.

Her every move, from smile to hand gesture will be analysed and scrutinised to the Nth degree.

The clothes she wears will now be instantly assumed to be some intricately coded message, woven by a team of PR experts.

"Here we can see Kate holding hands with Prince William while wearing a simple blue dress and flat heels, clearly showing her support to her husband-to-be..."

And this will never stop. Ever.

William and Kate – or Catherine as she must now be known – will probably even get their own unique and rather hideous combined MonoName.

Think Brangelina or Breniffer. Granted, both of these examples rely on Brad Pitt's inclusion in the relationship, but you get the picture.

Alternatively, the Press could go down the popular SamCam route, choosing rather to fuse Christian and surnames of one of the parties involved as opposed to both.

Kay-Midd, anyone?

How does Kay-Midd (go with me, it may stick) deal with such a monumental lifestyle change overnight?

Her life will never be the same again.

I just hope that we have learned from past mistakes to give the Royal Family enough respect and distance so they can live their lives in peace.

If there is a story in your area you think we should be covering contact the news editor, Gareth Arnold, on 01303 817025 or email him on the details above. If you want to be the next Canterbury blogger then all you have to do is submit an article to us (of around 550 words) and email it to the editor. And don't forget, for all the latest news and video from your town log-on to www.yourcanterbury.co.uk.

What people need is an effective mixed recycling collection where they can put everything for recycling in one bag without having to worry if it is the right sort of paper or can. In terms of cost, many other councils have proved that mixed recycling collections need not cost any more. Our refuse collectors do offer a great service and collect everything that is put out, so no overflowing bins, but this is not environmentally or financially sustainable. Whether I put out one black sack or 10, they will all be collected. No incentive to think about what we are throwing away and no incentive to recycle. We have the infrastructure in Kent, Ashford councils need to move with the times and play catch up.

posted online at www.yourmedway.co.uk

• I think what Gary's entertaining and thought-provoking blog is saying is that recycling schemes have to be carefully-thought out and introduced with a bit of nous.

My experience of Ashford's waste collection is similar to his; they take my rubbish away with predictable efficiency. Like him I pay a lot of money in council tax and like him I only really need my bins collected and a few streetlights in return. I have a torch, so they could actually ditch the lights, but driving to the tip is a pain. Gary's point, though, is that the 'best' systems tend to come with a fascist-style regime for enforcing them – perhaps because they have to. And, like him, I could do without the hassle involved in stropky collectors refusing to take mildly contaminated recycling or over-full bins away. In Ashford we don't have that; and that's a good thing. Oh, and I do recycle glass, tins, magazines and cardboard – I'm on your side. Incidentally, we just about halved our weekly 'waste arisings', to use an awful new local government phrase, by moving from big bulky plastic cartons to milk from the milkman. Best thing we ever did in terms of the environment.

Malcolm Triggs

posted online at www.yourmedway.co.uk

• How lazy are you? It is your waste and your responsibility. If you took the time to do any research before penning this brainless rant you would understand that sorting through waste after it has been collected produces recycling of very little environmental value. Meanwhile, if you took a second to find out how much waste and recycling costs you (about £100 per household per year in the UK) then you would stop the ill-informed 'I pay my council tax' chestnut. It is nothing short of a scandal that Ashford has come bottom – a largely affluent borough that has come even lower than deprived inner London Boroughs such as Tower Hamlets and Newham. But your complacent and selfish attitude gives a reason why perhaps they can get away with it.

Mike Webster

posted online at www.yourmedway.co.uk

• Strange how millions of people can manage with fortnightly collections, yet you can't go more than a week without your bin contents decomposing into putrid waste.

Callum

posted online at www.yourmedway.co.uk

Gary Wright responds: You're right Callum, I can't. In a civilised society, weekly waste collections should be a minimum expectation. I pay for it and am prepared to continue paying for that essential service.

Blair to blame for 'terrorist' handout

The news that the British Government is to pay millions of pounds to 16 individuals, including Binyam Mohamed, swanning around Pakistan and Afghanistan up to no good as 'alleged terrorists' must fill all the decent people of England with dismay.

All this falls on the cash rich, morally poor ex-PM Tony Blair and the long forgotten George W Bush causing new world disorder.

This is a very sad day for democracy, freedom and a good day for our enemies.

Alan Ewins, by email

Local solution to nationwide issue

Localism, localism, localism is what counts, communities minister Eric

Pickles has told us all. Though he did add, with a wry smile, not necessarily in that order.

Now it seems it isn't the order of these words that is in doubt – it's their meaning. In fact, it appears localism has failed at its first hurdle, if the recent announcement on local enterprise partnerships (LEPs) is anything to go by.

While LEPs might not sound very exciting, the Government has hopes that they will 'radically reshape the way business and government interact at the local level'.

That is right, it will have far-reaching implications for decision-making on infrastructure, housing and enterprise.

During the summer, Mr Pickles, along with business secretary Vince Cable, called upon businesses and local authorities to seize the initiative and create their own local partnerships. That is why we in Medway asked for one to be based around the historic county of Kent – called the Kent and Medway bid.

To me, that sounds pretty local. And it was a bid supported by the majority of MPs in Kent, as well as many businesses and council leaders. Even though Mr Pickles has said 'I won't stand in your way' and 'I will trust local government to deliver', he didn't like what he was hearing about a Kent and Medway LEP. In fact, he intervened at a very late stage to ensure plans for an alternative LEP for Kent and Essex were realised.

Then only a couple of weeks ago, East Sussex was included. This so-called 'Super LEP' which is the largest to be given the go-ahead by the Government, will have a combined population of 3.9 million. The area of these three counties is a third the size of Belgium. Is this really what we were promised by the localism agenda? Because in reality, this sounds more like a return to regionalism than the promised local solutions decided by local communities.

A Kent, Essex and East Sussex LEP could include 34 councils and thousands of businesses. Far too large to allow proper decision-making. This LEP has been forced on local government by the communities and business secretaries, despite opposition from local authorities and businesses across Kent. This makes a mockery of Mr Pickles statement that local government should not be told what to do by Whitehall.

It's surprising Mr Pickles hasn't found time to meet with Medway before this announcement, even though we have made numerous attempts to arrange a meeting.

Kent and Medway is not an artificial region – it is a stable, organic, historic county with a natural economy. With a population of 1.6 million – larger than any UK city except London – it would be large enough to negotiate with Whitehall, but small enough to address local issues.

In the spirit of localism, I would ask both ministers to think again about their decree for one Local Enterprise Partnership for Kent, Essex and East Sussex. But before they do, they might want to check to see what localism really means.

Christmas in... Herne Bay

Town getting switched on for the festive season

■ BY YOURCANTERBURY REPORTER

HERNE Bay has opted for a traditional lights switch on, with plenty of music and entertainers to keep the crowds – expected to number more than 2,000 – happy.

The Christmas Lights will be switched on by the stars of the Marlowe Arena Panto, Robin Hood, which includes John Thomson from TV's Cold Feet and Coronation Street, and his merry men, Dave Lee and Phil Holden.

Live music, carol singers and children's characters will all add to the fun and youngsters will enjoy an early visit from Father Christmas.

Town centre manager, Chris West, said: "In previous years we have had in excess of 2,000 people attend the Christmas Lights Switch On.

"It boosts the town's economy and shows there is an alternative to buying your Christmas presents in a clone town, as 80 per cent of the town's businesses are independent.

"We are keen to use local talent and involve the local businesses."

The Herne Bay event will take place in the heart of the town at Mortimer Street, on Saturday, November 27.

The fun starts at 3pm and as well as the festive fun, shoppers will be able to take advantage of discounts in more than 150 local businesses that accept the town's loyalty card, the BAY Card.

Special offers and giveaways up for grabs

AT 4PM, organisers will be giving away 50 Children Selection packs to the first 50 BAY Card holders.

Plus, drivers of the first 100 vehicles who park in the William Street Car park from 2.30pm to 5.30 will be able to park for free providing they have a BAY Card.

There is a Christmas window spotting competition for the children and a free prize draw to win £100 vouchers to spend in local shops.

STAR TURN: Marlowe panto star John Thomson will join cast members to switch on the Herne Bay Christmas lights

Spires aiming high with £14m academy

■ BY GARETH ARNOLD

SPIRES Academy has submitted a planning application for its £14 million new home.

School chiefs envisage "an eye-catching, ultra-modern academy, built around a central hub, which incorporates facilities for the arts, business and sport".

Work will start on the 5,872 square metre building in March, 2011, and is due for completion in September, 2012.

The new building will be erected on school fields across the road from the existing academy, adjacent to the A28 in Sturry.

The design, which will accommodate 600 students in six learning areas, was developed in consultation with Kent County Council, academy leaders, sponsors and students.

Excited

Headteacher Helen Foster said: "I'm very excited about our new building. It's a privilege to have the opportunity to be involved in its design and I think the building reflects us as a school community."

"There is a large heart built into the middle of the academy, where the whole school can come together to work, rest, dine and socialise, while learning areas are quiet and focused specialist spaces."

Ms Foster said she also wanted the academy to offer services to the wider community. "The new academy will be a valuable resource for the area and I look forward to working with the community of Hersden and Sturry to provide facilities and opportunities for the future," she said.

Gerry Pack, a Spires Academy sponsor and chairman of the trustees, said: "Since becoming an academy three years ago, the senior team at Spires has worked hard to ensure we achieve our overall mission of giving every student the best opportunity to make the most of their talents.

"This fantastic building will provide an inspirational environment in which students can excel and is a major step in achieving our plan. To do the best job, you need the right tools. That's why a great deal of thought has been given to the building's design, so opportunities to learn are enhanced."

"It will be a great place in which to learn, socialise and grow as a school community."

The plans have been lodged with Kent County Council, submitted by architectural firm Jestico and Whiles on behalf of construction firm Carillion.

Ben Marston, of Jestico and Whiles, said: "The mixed two and three-storey radial design, conceived in response to the ethos of the school, has a gathering place at its heart."

"The dramatic central area provides space for display and performance, essential for the academy's specialisms in Business and Enterprise and Visual Creative and Performing Arts."

"It will provide a high-quality flexible learning environment and incorporates specialist facilities such as a four-court sports hall, dance studio, drama studio and enterprise suite."

FRESH START: Architect's image of how the new Spires Academy building, due for completion in 2012, would look

Apology and pledge of action after damning Ofsted verdict

A DAMNING verdict on County Hall's care of vulnerable children has prompted an apology from KCC leader Cllr Paul Carter.

The authority was rated "inadequate" for its safeguarding and looked-after children services after a two-week Ofsted inspection last month. Areas of concern to the inspectors include the management and supervision of services, low educational attainment of looked-after children, a high number of cases not receiving quality assessments, and social workers with high caseloads.

Cllr Carter said: "We fully accept the findings of the report and where we have fallen short offer sincere apologies. All agencies are focused in putting right the shortcomings and weaknesses identified."

"There is no greater priority for us all than the protection of vulnerable children, young people and their families."

Updates

"We know actions speak louder than words. We would like to reassure everyone the areas identified for immediate improvement by Ofsted are already being addressed. We will provide regular updates so people can see what is being done and hold us to account."

Social workers have faced intense scrutiny since the failings that led to the death of Baby P in Haringey, north London, were made public in November, 2008.

KCC admitted it was struggling to cope with the increased number of referrals since that time, which average 2,000 a month, including about 180 a week in Thanet alone.

The county also has the added responsibility of 900 unaccompanied asylum-seeking children, as well as about 1,500 looked-after youngsters placed in Kent by other local authorities.

Rosalind Turner – managing director of the council's children, families and education department – said: "KCC and its partners fully recognise the pressures on the service and regret very much that some vulnerable children and families are not receiving the quality and timely response they deserve."

"There are examples of good practice in the report but we need to confront all aspects deemed less than adequate."

"We are undertaking a major improvement programme with external scrutiny and support. The service, along with many others nationally, has become too focused on process and coping with the relentless demand."

The inspection was carried out two months after Ofsted warned children were at risk due to inadequate and late assessments by KCC's social services team.

The new report also highlights concerns about access to child and adolescent mental health services, a high number of "inappropriate" referrals from other agencies, and insufficient use of early intervention support in the community.

A joint statement by NHS Eastern and Coastal Kent and NHS West Kent read: "The NHS in Kent is committed to doing the utmost to safeguard children. While we acknowledge the seriousness of this report, we feel the feedback will help us continue to focus our efforts."

"The two primary care trusts in Kent are addressing the concerns raised in the report as a matter of urgency and are working closely with our acute hospitals, community services, mental health providers and GPs to continue to improve the quality of safeguarding services in Kent."

Panto season? It's right behind you!

We check out the region's top family pantomimes this festive season

PANTOMIME

Various dates and venues

PANTOMIME season is almost upon us. That's right, it's once again time for dames to don their tights and TV stars to ham it up as only they can, as the region's productions are set to spring into life.

Many rehearsals are already under way, so don't be surprised if you bump into a soap star in your local supermarket.

There are several pantos set to delight families in the East Kent area, as the Christmas and new year tradition continues.

For many theatres it's a time for them to raise their profile in the community and make some money with the flagships shows.

So it's time to decide which one you want to go to and book your seats.

In Margate, the Winter Gardens is the venue to see Cinderella, a pantomime classic.

Kate Anthony, who was Aunty Pam in Coronation Street, heads the cast as Baroness Hardup.

The show runs from December 19 to 30, with seats at £14 (concessions £12).

There will also be a special schools' performance on December 16.

It's great value entertainment for all the family this Christmas and there will be two performances every day at 2.30pm and 7pm.

The region's most high-profile panto is at the Marlowe Theatre Arena, Canterbury.

Robin Hood stars John Thomson from TV's The Fast Show as the wicked Sherriff of Nottingham, CBeebie's Sid Sloane as Robin and local funnyman Dave Lee.

Robin's love interest is the fragrant Maid Marion, played by newcomer Katie Birtill.

The show takes place in the Marlowe Theatre Arena tent and runs from December 4 to January 16.

Ticket prices vary, but range from £10 to £24.50.

To book, or find out more, visit www.marlowetheatre.org or call 01227 7877787.

In Folkestone, the story of Aladdin will be brought to life at the Leas Cliff Hall.

With all the ingredients that panto audiences have come to expect – big song and dance numbers, lavish scenes and lots of audience participation – Aladdin is guaranteed to keep big kids as well as little ones entertained.

Aladdin runs from December 23 to January 3. Tickets are priced at £16.25 and are available from www.leascliffhall.org.uk or by calling 0844 847 1776.

Back in Margate, the town's Operatic Society promises a "distinctive version" of Sleeping Beauty.

The show features Neil Paterson as the Prince Phillip and Georgia Rowland-Elliott as

PANTO STARS: Kate Anthony (top) stars as Baroness Hardup in Cinderella, while Margate Operatic Society take to the Winter Gardens stage in Sleeping Beauty

the Sleeping Beauty.

Lavish sets and spectacular costumes and a plot full of twists and turns is promised.

It also takes place at the Margate Winter Gardens, from December 1 to December 5.

Tickets are £9 and available by calling 01843 296111 or 01843 297780 or on the website at www.margatewintergardens.co.uk.

Full information is available at www.margateoperaticsociety.com.

Further west, at Sittingbourne Community College on December 2 and 3, you can be swept away on a magical carpet into the wonderful world of Aladdin, as students perform the colourful tale.

The Sittingbourne Community College's annual Whole School Show promises to be a spectacular event this year with over 100 cast and crew members, featuring all the Aladdin characters we know and love.

Tickets are £6 adults and £4 students and concessions. To order yours, either email Hayley.mcgintry@sittingbourne.kent.sch.uk or call 01795 472449.

For more information, visit www.sittingbourne.kent.sch.uk.

Next week we'll round-up the pantomimes in Mid and West Kent.

APPOINTMENT WITH DEATH

Thursday, November 25, Friday, November 26, Roundhouse Theatre, Dover

THE Dover Youth Theatre holds this production of the Christie classic, brought to you by its talented senior students.

Following the success of their versions of The Women and Our Town, this takes place in the Dover Discovery Centre part of the theatre.

It's 1945 and Jerusalem's King Solomon Hotel has seen many strange travellers in its time, but none so strange as those who are now visiting.

Besides the formidable Lady Westholme and her timid companion Miss Pryce, there is bluff Alderman Higgs, English doctor

Sarah King and French colleague Dr Gerard.

The focal point of the party is Mrs Boynton, an elderly American invalid, and her stepchildren.

To the casual onlooker they are models of devotion, but the reality is very different and one of them has an appointment with death, a mystery for TransJordanian policeman Colonel Carberry to solve.

Tickets are £8 or £5 concessions. Call the box office on 01304 202544 or visit www.doveryouththeatre.co.uk for more information.

QUEX

Sunday, November 28, Powell Cotton Museum, Birchington

THE museum's doors are being opened to welcome you to Quexmas.

This 50-stall Christmas Craft Fair promises to solve all your present-buying problems and will have a huge range of gifts for all the family.

It takes place from 11am to 5pm and admission is free.

As well as having stalls selling handmade crafts, including jewellery, books, bags, hampers, soaps, toys and seasonal food items, there will also be activities for children.

These include a Santa's Grotto, card-making, lino printing and a secret wrapping room, so there will be lots to keep the little ones occupied.

You'll be able to appreciate the grand Quex House dining room, which will be decorated for a traditional Christmas, take a horse and carriage ride round the grounds and listen to Birchington School Choir and the Quexmas Singers perform seasonal favourites.

You can also enjoy tea, coffee or mulled wine in the Friends of the Museum coffee shop.

For more information, call 01843 842168 or email enquiries@quexmuseum.org.

COLDPLACE

Friday, December 3, East Quay, Whitstable

TOP Coldplay tribute band Coldplace have just ended a European tour and the next stop is Whitstable.

Formed in 2003, the band have a real likeness with their chart-topping heroes, especially in frontman Shane Crofts as Chris Martin.

Now one of the biggest bands in the world, Coldplay have sunk into the national consciousness, and many believe Coldplace to be their closest tribute.

The show on the East Quay will be their last before they head to Russia to play in front of 20,000 people in the Moscow Arena.

Their aim, as a stunningly accurate tribute, is to capture the feeling of a live Coldplay performance – the music, visuals, energy and atmosphere.

Having played almost 300 gigs across the length and breadth of the UK, Coldplace have also played in countries such as Malta, The Dominican Republic, The Netherlands and Ireland, been featured in The Sun and been reviewed on Sky and the BBC.

Tickets are £10 in advance from www.wegotickets.com or from local retailers.

Visit www.whitlive.co.uk for full details.

THE BEES

Thursday, November 25, The Farmhouse, Canterbury

BUZZ along to see top indie band The Bees in Canterbury, when the former Mercury Music Prize nominees visit the city.

On tour to promote their new album, Every Step's A Yes, released in October, they play an intimate show at The Farmhouse venue in Dover Street.

They are due to play a string of dates supporting Paul Weller in the next two months, so the chance to see them up close and personal should not be missed.

Their new single Winter Rose is released on December 20 on the Fiction label.

The band members are no strangers to the area, having co-headlined the Lounge on the Farm festival at Merton Farm, Canterbury, in 2007.

The Isle of White band are known for their brand of country-infused rock, with added elements of reggae, Americana and their trademark strong harmonies.

A show not to miss as they return to play to an appreciative audience.

Tickets to the show are £12.50 and available from www.thefarmhousecanterbury.co.uk.

Over-18s only.

FELIX DEXTER

Saturday, December 11, Quarterhouse, Folkestone

FRESH from critical acclaim for his characters and performance on BBC2's Bellamy's People, former Time Out Comedian of the Year winner, Felix Dexter comes to east Kent as part of a 40-date UK tour.

The comedian's new stand-up show, Multiple Personalities in Order, was first performed at this year's Edinburgh Festival, where it received great reviews.

Felix has performed in a maximum security prison, been threatened with violence for lacking religious conviction and been offered free sexual favours in the street.

These stories and more are full of contradictions, which provide a backdrop for his characters and this year's show.

Felix, an actor and writer, played three of the main characters in Bellamy's People, which starred Paul Whitehouse, Simon Day and Charlie Higson of The Fast Show.

There was Early D, the self-styled Lion of Harlesden, Aubrey Dubuisson, the public school architect and Julius Olufemwe, hotel management student and admirer of all things English.

All three characters now appear live as part of Multiple Personalities in Order.

For tickets (£15 adults, £13 concessions) call 01303 85850 or visit www.quarterhouse.co.uk.

Beginning of the end is bleak and two-dimensional for wizard Harry

■ BY DAMON SMITH

AND so it begins – the final chapter of JK Rowling's best-selling fantasy saga, which holds the honour of the highest-grossing film franchise of all time.

Cleaved in two for creative and commercial reasons, Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows follows the shocking events of Harry Potter And The Half-Blood Prince, with Harry (Daniel Radcliffe), Ron (Rupert Grint) and Hermione (Emma Watson) facing the renewed threat from Voldemort (Ralph Fiennes) and the Death Eaters.

David Yates, who directed the sixth film, strikes an even darker, gloomier tone for his imagining of the seventh book, leavened with occasional flashes of humour such as when Mad-Eye Moody (Brendan Gleeson) warns his fellow wizards that the magical Polyjuice Potion tastes like something unsavoury a goblin might produce.

Screenwriter Steve Kloves remains faithful to Rowling's hefty tome, but is allowed brief moments of artistic licence.

We see Harry and Hermione tenderly dancing together, and Voldemort preys upon Ron's insecurities and jealousy by taunting him with a vision of a naked Harry and Hermione locked in a steamy embrace, their blushes spared by swirling tendrils of smoke.

The third film is certificate 12A for a reason.

Even more startling is a stylish animated sequence, that recounts The Tale Of The Three Brothers from Hermione's copy of The Tales Of Beedle The Bard, which explains the meaning of the Deathly Hallows.

The nefarious Lord Voldemort and his followers, including Bellatrix Lestrange (Helena Bonham Carter) and Lucius Malfoy (Jason Isaacs), continue to grow in power, threatening everything that Dumbledore (Michael Gambon) and his followers hold dear.

With Hogwarts in disarray, Harry, Ron and Hermione embark on a perilous quest to find

HALF A STORY: Grief and sexual tension are among the themes for Harry, Hermione and their friends in the first instalment of Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows the mysterious Horcruxes and stop the forces of darkness taking over the wizarding world.

Originally intended for release in 3D, Harry Potter And The Deathly Hallows: Part 1 will only screen in traditional 2D, after the technical wizards at Warner Bros were unable to convert this first instalment to the eye-popping format in time for the worldwide release.

In some ways, it's a blessing, because the film's running time of 146 minutes would mean eye strain for younger audiences.

That said, Part 2 will definitely screen in 3D, ensuring Harry, Ron and Hermione conclude their epic quest with a bang.

Several sequences in David Yates's film have clearly been designed with the format in mind, such as when Voldemort's snake Nagini springs at the camera, fangs bared.

Radcliffe's limited acting range draws unwelcome attention and he is unable to convey the grief of his teenage hero.

Meanwhile, Watson blossoms, capturing the heartbreak of a Mudblood who may lose everything, and Grint provides comic relief as well as mild sexual tension as Ron wrestles with his feelings for Hermione.

Fiennes glowers behind his flawless make-up and Yates seamlessly melds visual effects and live action, not least with the re-introduction of Dobby (voiced by Toby Jones).

Part 1 concludes with good and evil evenly balanced, both sides having suffered losses in pursuit of ultimate victory.

The release of Part 2 on July 15, 2011, seems an agonisingly long way off.

ANIMAL MAGIC: Autumnwatch presenters Chris Packham and Kate Humble

YOUR TV REVIEW AUTUMNWATCH: BBC2, 8.30pm, Thursday

■ BY ED HILL

AUTUMNWATCH comes to an end next week and I for one am not disappointed.

The programme has had a bit of a makeover in the last few outings since that stalwart of natural history programmes, Bill Oddie, decided to leave. He has been replaced by the less grumpy Chris Packham who now sits next to Kate Humble.

It has to be said the sexual chemistry between the two is less disturbing than it was between Mr Oddie and Kate. He was old enough to be her father and I could have done without the stream of innuendo that was inevitable when watching animals do the fundamentals of life.

The programme tries in as many ways as possible to get the public involved. Send us your pictures, emails, join in with our online quiz and press the red button to see more footage of stags rutting, badgers grooming and birds bonking. This is an increasing tendency in TV these days. The cheapest way to make television is to get your viewers to send in the content.

This is just one of my problems with the programme and its sister Springwatch. When it first started in 2005 it was a good idea. The live element of watching the animals was something new and it did put a focus on British wildlife which is often neglected for the flashier critters of the African savannah or Amazonian rainforest.

But five years later the novelty is wearing off. There's only so many times watching a badger scratch its privates or wren chicks depositing their faecal sacks into their mother's beak is appealing.

They have also introduced another new presenter, Martin Hughes-Games. With his long, flowing locks and soft voice I suspect he has been brought in to be the eye candy for female viewers.

Mr Hughes-Games is a very experienced natural history producer who has now made the move in front of the camera, but quite frankly his style just seems to reinforce the feeling that this programme is made more for the enjoyment of the people making it than its viewers.

I suspect the fact that Mr Oddie and the other long-term presenter Simon King have left the programme is a sign that they could see the end is nigh. Rats can always be seen leaving a sinking ship. (Now that would be fascinating natural history viewing.)

Bees creating a buzz on the farm

NIGHT OFF: The Bees are currently on tour, supporting Modfather Paul Weller

■ BY SIMON ROBINSON

INDIE rockers The Bees buzz into Canterbury tomorrow night to play The Farmhouse.

The Isle of Wight outfit have agreed to play the intimate venue on a night off from supporting Modfather Paul Weller on his 2010 stadium tour.

The talented six-piece, famed for radio-friendly hits such as A Minha Menina, Wash in the Rain and the annoyingly infectious Chicken Payback, will perform all their classic tracks as well as new material from their fourth studio album, Every Step's A Yes.

A Farmhouse spokesman said: "The Bees are one of our favourite bands here at The Farmhouse, having graced the Sunday night line-up at Lounge On The Farm in both 2007 and 2008.

"Impossible to pigeon-hole, The Bees play a mix of americana, folk, blues, reggae and world music, that is danceable, grooving, uplifting and lazy all in the same breath.

"Guaranteeing smiles all round, they are a truly classic English act, likened to many, but comparable to none.

"Their new album is promising to be one of their finest yet from first listenings, which, in relation to Mercury-nominated Sunshine Hit Me and instant classic Free The Bees, is no small feat.

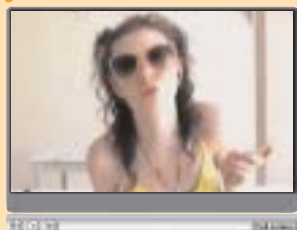

"Probably one of the biggest acts we've had join us at The Farmhouse, this is as exclusive and as intimate as it gets, and tickets are gonna buzz out the door for this, so don't sleep on it."

Next up at The Farmhouse is Last Japan on Friday, December 3, quickly followed by the legend that is DJ Format on Saturday, December 11.

BACKDROP: The beauty of skiing at Lake Tahoe is enhanced by stunning views over the lake on one side and the Nevada desert on the other

A Heavenly destination for winter sports and casinos

■ BY ROSAMOND HUTT

IT might be beach happy in the summer, but California also makes a fantastic skiing destination.

As our eight-man gondola inched its way up the mountain, the neon-lit casinos, motels and wedding chapels lining the highway shrank to toytown proportions, before vanishing entirely beneath a ridge.

At last, Heavenly was living up to its name. We found ourselves in a hushed, Narnia-esque world, with bear tracks criss-crossing the pine forest, branches creaking under layers of snow and Lake Tahoe's sparkling waters, far below, reflecting the peaks of the Sierra Nevada.

Holidaying in Heavenly, on the south shore of Lake Tahoe, which straddles the California/Nevada border on America's west coast, means wholeheartedly embracing the resort's dual personality.

By day, our group was 3,000 metres above sea level, skiing on immaculately-groomed runs, reveling in spectacular views of the cobalt blue lake on the Californian side and the rusty expanse of Nevada's desert on the other.

After dark, having abandoned any notion of traditional, gluhwein-fuelled apres-ski, we joined the punters trying their luck on the green baize tables in giant, Vegas-style casinos in Nevada.

At Harrah's, a casino-hotel with almost 5,000 square metres of gaming space, we watched Arthur 'Arty' Hervey entertaining the highrollers, swingers and bachelor parties with a repertoire of hits, ranging from Frank Sinatra to Justin Timberlake.

Rosamond Hutt was a guest of Virgin Holidays, which offers seven nights in California including flights to San Francisco, five nights at the 5V Embassy Suites Hotel in South Lake Tahoe and two nights at the Sheraton Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco, both on B&B, from £978. Connecting flights ex-Manchester, Glasgow and Edinburgh start at £99 return. Prices include car hire. Virgin Holidays reservations: 0844 557 3859 or www.virginholidays.co.uk.

One alternative to the casinos is to join the starry-eyed couples on a sunset dinner cruise aboard the Tahoe Queen, a paddleboat which steamed up and down the Mississippi in the early 20th century.

On another afternoon, our group swapped skis and snowboards for snowmobiles.

We roared along zig-zag trails, through forests of towering pines and aspens, to the top of the mountain to find such picture-perfect views of the lake that I half expected a stagehand to appear and start raising the backdrop.

Our ski instructor, Pat, warned us about Tahoe's abundant black bear population, and has caught several sifting through his rubbish bins. The backcountry is also home to chipmunks, raccoons, bobcats and mountain lions.

But hopes of spotting some of the local wildlife were dashed by the combined din of revving Yamaha engines and shrieks as our group grappled with unfamiliar steering and brakes.

Tahoe, the Native American word for big water, is the world's second biggest Alpine lake after Titicaca, and one of America's most popular skiing areas.

Bought in 2002 by Vail Resorts, which also owns four ski areas in Colorado, Heavenly is the largest of seven resorts dotted around the lake, attracting around a million ski and board visitors each year.

Its proximity to hubs like San Francisco in California and Reno in Nevada make the resort a huge hit with day-trippers and weekenders, as well as inter-state and long-haul visitors.

MOTORS NEWS

Citroën C4 offers more size and more space

ORDER books have opened for the all-new Citroën C4, which brings the French marque's more contemporary sculpted styling to its family hatchback.

Launched in five-door format in January it will be slightly larger externally than its predecessor, with enhanced aerodynamics due to front and rear spoilers.

However, it is roomier inside and the boot is claimed to be the largest in its sector. Prices start from £15,595 for the 1.4 VTi 95hp VTR petrol version.

Skoda voted What Car best manufacturer

MORE than 30,000 What Car? readers have voted Skoda the Best Manufacturer of 2010.

Skoda models also scored well in their categories, with the Octavia (sporty vRS model is pictured) first in the Small Family car group and second in the Estates category; the Roomster was fourth best MPV, the Yeti voted fifth best SUV and the Fabia was in the top 10 supermini rankings. The VW-owned Czech brand has also notched UK sales of 37,000 cars this year.

Landmark luxury here in black and white

LAND Rover has forewarned of a Landmark limited edition of the Discovery 4x4 available from January.

Priced at £46,945, and using black and white colour themes, LR says the new versions feature high-end interiors including an ivory leather interior option - a first for the Discovery.

Fitted as standard is the popular 3.0 litre SDV6 twin turbodiesel and the marque's famous Terrain Response, which equips the car for virtually all on-road/off-road driving situations.

GREAT ALL-ROUNDER: Plenty of space, good value, all the toys you need and a five-year guarantee thrown in - just don't let the badge snobs put you off this great family 4x4

Hyundai crossover is a no-brainer - guaranteed

CROSSOVER is the motor market buzzword and Hyundai was typically quick to voice it, with the ix35 launched earlier this year.

Replacing its more conventional Tucson SUV (sports utility vehicle), the ix35 is more compact, lighter on its feet and the sharp lines are reminiscent of the Ford Kuga - one of the smarter compact SUVs on the market.

It starts at just £16,195, yet brings alloys, air con, Bluetooth and iPod/USB connectivity, heated front and rear seats and door mirrors, leather steering wheel and gear knob and reverse parking sensors as standard, plus five years' roadside assistance and Hyundai's usual five-year/unlimited miles warranty.

But that keen entry price only buys you the front-wheel drive 1.6-litre petrol model - most buyers want the front-wheel drive diesels (from £17,395), though there is still demand for the full 4x4 2.0-litre diesel versions from £19,995, as tested here.

This engine pulls well and feels incredibly refined and, though it is now a well-worn cliché, you really would be hard-pressed to tell whether it was actually a petrol unit. It is also incredibly clean, with emissions attracting a road tax of just £90 a year.

The engine works well in 4x4 format too; worth a relatively paltry extra £1,000 against an equivalent front-wheel drive version, and a bargain here in flagship Premium form, bringing full-length panoramic glass sunroof, lots of interior chrome, cruise control, dual zone climate control, part-leather upholstery, smart roof rails and loads more.

The 4x4's fuel and tyre consumption cannot possibly be as good as that for a front-driven version; official figures show that fuel consumption drops less than two mpg for the 4x4, but most drivers will exploit the extra grip and its partnership with a well-sorted chassis that shows what a clunker the Tucson was.

The cabin is well finished, though hardly earth-shattering in design, while the roominess and boot capacity are impressive, and the flat rear footwell makes it a comfortable five-seater.

Chuck in that copper-bottom warranty and it's a no-brainer but for the branding, though badge snobbery is fast waning in these more realistic times...we hope.

Landlords advised on how to beat squatters

THE latest plans to give landlords information on combating squatters has been praised by an industry expert.

Paul Shamplina, founder of Landlord Action, said that housing minister Grant Shapps's plans were "encouraging" as they were taking a "proactive approach" to helping property-owners deal with illegal dwellers.

"We have also recently seen the stereotypical image of squatters brought into question.

"There has been an increase in squatting by young professionals who claim they cannot afford to rent, let alone buy a property, especially with the sharp rises in rent that we have seen of late," said Mr Shamplina.

He went on to say that landlords should ensure void periods were minimised and the property did not appear to be unoccupied, while reducing the ease of access to a home was also an important step.

In the new legal guide, homeowners were told that "the law is on their side".

Warning to tenants over cheap rent scams

TENANTS should beware fraudsters who advertise properties at a cheap rent but then disappear with the deposits paid.

The thieves use websites and genuine letting-agency photographs copied from the internet to dupe people into putting down payments of thousands of pounds.

The property ombudsman has received 5,000 complaints so far this year, while the National Fraud Intelligence Bureau issued an alert last month after receiving 95 complaints, up to 50 of which were in London.

Housing charity Shelter believes such fraud is more widespread than previously thought, particularly in London, where a buoyant lettings market and shortage of properties has seen rents rise by 20 per cent in the last year.

Buy-to-let market up as more seek to rent homes

■ BY NICK AMES

THE recovery of the buy-to-let market continued in the third quarter, according to recent figures which say it has been boosted by strong demand for rental property.

A total of £2.8 billion was advanced to investment landlords in the three months to the end of September.

This represents 33 per cent more than during the same period of 2009 and the highest level since the final quarter of 2008, according to the Council of Mortgage Lenders (CML).

The buy-to-let market was hit hard by the original credit crunch and the recession, with many lenders withdrawing completely as they struggled to raise funds to lend.

Lending levels hit a low of £1.9 billion in the second quarter of 2009, but advances have been gradually moving upwards since then, as the market has recovered.

Despite the recent improvement, lending levels remain only a fraction of the record £12.4 billion advanced to buy-to-let investors during the third quarters of both 2006 and 2007.

The CML said the rise in lending during the third quarter, which was 12 per cent up on the previous three months, was driven by strong demand for rental property as many first-time buyers struggled to get the mortgages they needed to buy their own home.

Michael Coogan, director general of the CML, said: "We would expect buy-to-let demand to pick up further if current rising rental trends continue and house prices remain broadly stable.

SHORT SUPPLY: A strong demand for rented property has resulted in a rise in buy-to-let mortgages

"However, there is short-term uncertainty as a result of the unresolved debate on housing benefit and landlords' response to new limits.

"The bigger question is whether there will be sufficient supply side capacity to meet that demand, as the number of buy-to-let lenders dwindled in the credit crunch after 2007 and is yet to be fully restored."

Nigel Terrington, chief executive of buy-to-let lender Paragon, said the figures were "encouraging" and reflected higher confidence among landlords and lenders in the market.

"Although we are still a long way from normal market conditions and lending is low by historical standards, the market is heading in the right direction," he said.

Further figures revealing a stagnant mortgage market in September underlined the soaring demand for scarce rental properties.

There were 50,000 loans for house purchase, unchanged on August, although the value of loans fell by £200 million.

First-time buyers back on the scene

PROPERTY website Rightmove has suggested that first-time buyers (FTBs) are returning to the housing market.

According to a report by the property website, which questioned 25,584 potential buyers last month, first-time buyers are being encouraged by falls in house prices.

It found that some 33 per cent of FTBs expect the cost of property to be lower this time next year, up from just 20 per cent in the previous three months.

Meanwhile, just over a quarter of FTBs hope to purchase their first home in the next 12 months – up from 22 per cent in July, said Rightmove.

FTBs are key to the housing market and a shortage of them has meant a full recovery has yet to be seen.

They still need a hefty deposit of at least 25 per cent to secure a mortgage, according to figures, and this is why the numbers have been dwindling.

Finally, the survey also found that more than half of FTBs are aged between 25 and 34.

STRUGGLE: Canterbury had a tough task against Richmond

Sluggish start put Canterbury on the back foot

Canterbury 28 Richmond 52

A DREADFUL start put paid to any hopes Canterbury had of upsetting a powerful Richmond, but a strong showing in the second-half saw them claim the consolation of a bonus point.

The task always looked a tough one for the city club, with one win in their previous six league outings, against a side looking for a ninth straight victory.

It was made virtually impossible by a sluggish start which allowed Richmond to score 21 points in the first ten minutes. Basic errors and missed tackles were all the encouragement the slick visitors needed to run in three tries to take control.

Canterbury barely got out of their half for 20 minutes, but when they did it led to a first score, when Carlton Littlechild dived over. Tom Best kicked the conversion.

Richmond were far from finished, though, and added two more tries, the second a penalty try for tackling a man without the ball, as they took a 35-7 lead into half-time.

With nothing to lose Canterbury improved when the game resumed. Peter Kelly reduced the deficit with a try on 45 minutes, capitalising on good work from Matt Sheen. Best was again on target with the conversion.

Richmond cancelled it out with another try, leaving Canterbury with just a bonus point for four tries as their only realistic hope for something tangible. They achieved it with scores from Kelly, his 13th of the campaign, and Littlechild.

The visitors had the final say to inflict Canterbury's heaviest season defeat ahead of a trip to Ealing Trailfinders on Saturday.

BRACE: Rebecca Weston drove home two goals

Familiar tale as men lose and ladies win

THERE was a familiar pattern to the results involving Canterbury's top hockey sides at the weekend, with the inform ladies winning but the struggling men losing.

The pressure of leading the Women's Premier Division did not inhibit Nick Clark's side as they won 7-2 at Olton & West Warwicks on Sunday.

Olton, who are second bottom, took the lead early on, but within a minute Susannah Townsend had levelled the scores. Hayley Brown's fourth goal of the season gave the visitors a 2-1 lead at half-time, only for Olton to hit back early in the second-half.

The game was not in the balance for long, as Canterbury delivered a devastating spell which saw them score five goals in 15 minutes. Natasha Brennan restored the lead and Lucy Hyams then gave the visitors a two-goal cushion.

Townsend's second of the afternoon made the game safe, before youngster Rebecca Weston scored twice in four minutes to complete the rout. The victory kept them a point clear at the top, in contrast to Kwan Browne's men, who prop up the table after Saturday's 4-0 defeat at home to Loughborough Students.

There was only one goal in it at half-time, but the visitors doubled their lead shortly after the break and added two more in the closing stages.

The side will again look for their first win since the opening day when Hampstead and Westminster visit Polo Farm on Sunday, while on Saturday the ladies visit Slough, who won at Polo Farm earlier this season.

STAR BATSMAN: Martin van Jaarsveld's hopes of making a move north to Lancashire look to be over as the Red Rose county count the cost of their own redevelopment

Run machine van Jaarsveld looks set to remain at Kent

CRICKET

■ BY GLENN PEARSON

KENT look set to keep hold of star batsman Martin van Jaarsveld as it appears Lancashire will not be making any signings ahead of next summer.

The South African has been linked with a move away from St Lawrence for the last three seasons, but penned a new deal last year after turning down an offer to skipper Surrey. After another season in which he topped the run-scoring charts at Kent, speculation mounted about van Jaarsveld's future, particularly in the wake of Amjad Khan's exit due to Kent's unstable financial position at the end of last summer.

He was again linked with a move to Lancashire towards the end of this summer and it's believed he was a target for the Red Rose county, but financial pressure as a result of improvements to Old Trafford looks to have ended any hopes the 36-year-old may have had about moving north next season.

Mike Watkinson, Lancashire's director of cricket, writing in his column for the Manchester Evening News, said financial restrictions and a "lack of real value in the market" means additions at Old Trafford are highly unlikely.

"...we have short-term restrictions in terms of the finances we have for player recruitment and it is unlikely we will be adding to our squad for next season," he said. "And, like many other counties, it is highly likely we will go into the campaign without an overseas player."

If van Jaarsveld stays, it will be a major boost to Kent as they look to get back on a level footing after a difficult end to the season both on and off the pitch. It may also encourage several players to sign contract extensions, although the club are hopeful of making an announcement about two that have put pen to paper, some time this week.

Elsewhere, season ticket packages for the 2011 season have gone on sale at Kent, with a variety of options available depending on which competition supporters want to watch.

A season ticket for all home matches will cost £200 if bought by December 31, rising to £220 from January. Fans of limited overs cricket can buy a ticket which excludes the County Championship for £150, increasing to £165 in the New Year. Junior packages begin at £22 for players at affiliated clubs, while students taking advantage of the early bird deal can gain admission to all home games for £150.

Extensive work is taking place to redevelop the St Lawrence Ground in Canterbury this winter. One side effect is a decrease in parking space and members who want one of the 200 places at the ground will have to pay £200 for the season. A cheaper option is at nearby Simon Langton Girls' Grammar School, priced at £75.

Jamie Clifford, Kent's chief executive, said: "We have worked hard to produce a range of options that fit with people's lifestyles. There is already a buzz around about the coming year; with floodlights, a refurbished pavilion and improved facilities, we really will be the leading sports venue in the county."

Harvey's introduction key as Bay return to the top

FOOTBALL

BY DAVID PRITCHARD

Herne Bay 2

Harvey 78, Walker 90

Sevenoaks Town 1

LATE goals from Luke Harvey and Byron Walker saw a misfiring Herne Bay overcome Sevenoaks Town and return to the top of the Kent League table.

It was a result which looked unlikely for most of Saturday afternoon, as the home side struggled to find the rhythm which had seen them build a 14-game unbeaten run.

Watching from the sidelines Simon Halsey, Bay's manager, admitted he thought the sequence was coming to an end.

He said: "I was preparing for the first loss in quite a while. I hadn't had that feeling for ages, it's horrible and I don't want that coming again."

"We had to change it, I'd rather have done that and lost 2-0 than done nothing. Having the strength in depth to bring Luke [Harvey] off the bench is a massive thing for us. I'm lucky with the squad I've got because I can change the personnel without weakening it at all."

OFF THE BENCH: Luke Harvey scored the equaliser for Bay before setting up the winner for Byron Walker

Bay began well but lost their way after 15 minutes, unable to retain possession. Sevenoaks made the most of the invitation to control the game, without really testing Dan Eason in the hosts' goal.

The interval did little to rouse the Bay players and Town began to provide an end product to their possession. The only surprise was it took them until the 65th-minute to open the scoring, through defender Jon Lord.

Switching to a 3-4-3 formation, Harvey came on for David Crofts and the switch paid dividends. A long ball from Toby Ashmore was perfect for the substitute, who rounded the onrushing goalkeeper to equalise 12 minutes from time.

Bay were suddenly on top, but the visitors held firm until stoppage time. Harvey was again instrumental, crossing low for Walker to slot home a dramatic winner.

The victory saw Bay leapfrog VCD Athletic, who were in cup action, at the top of the table. Despite being unhappy at the level of performance for the first time in weeks, Halsey admitted the standards he sets could be too high at times.

He said: "I do have to sometimes take myself away from it and say the expectations are higher than they should be, but when you see them in training I want it to be like that all the time. It's a learning thing for myself, I don't think it's a bad thing but sometimes I do have to think 'come on, the players wouldn't be in the Kent League if they were consistently good'."

Bay visit Holmesdale on Saturday.

ROLLER HOCKEY

Kings dethroned by Spanish invaders

Herne Bay United Kings 2 Lloret de Mar 6

A POOR spell just before half-time cost Herne Bay United Kings the chance to win their first European roller hockey game on home soil.

The English champions more than matched Spanish professionals Lloret de Mar in Saturday's opening exchanges. They took the lead through prolific goalscorer Brendan Barker, much to the delight of a packed crowd at the Pier Pavilion.

A freak ricochet allowed the visitors to equalise and they went on to show their class, scoring four more goals in eight minutes to lead 5-1 at half-time. The second-half was much closer and United goalkeeper Jay Williamson made several outstanding saves. He was only beaten once, by a penalty, but Barker's second goal of the night ensured respectability for the hosts.

It leaves the Spanish side hot favourites to progress ahead of the second leg next month, but United manager Phil McVey was pleased with the display.

He said: "They did all I asked of them the majority of the time. The crowd and the cheerleaders were great, we had a full house and did ourselves proud, we had an eight-minute lapse in the first-half but came back and regained our composure."

Before the return leg in Spain, United return to league action with a crucial trip to title rivals Middlesbrough on December 4.

Tonbridge Invicta 2

Canterbury City 3

A THRILLING comeback saw Canterbury City come from two goals behind in the final 20 minutes to pinch all three points at Tonbridge Invicta.

The feat was made all the more impressive as the visitors scored their last two goals with only ten men, following Ben Smith's dismissal.
